

FAQs for Reciprocal Membership Agreement with ICAS

What is the Recognition Membership Agreement with ICAS about?

The agreement allows for eligible members of ISCA and ICAS to become members of the other institute.

For CA (Singapore) to become ICAS members:

1. How do I become a ICAS member?

Members who joined ISCA as a CA (Singapore) member after completing the Singapore CA Qualification (SCAQ) will be able to apply to ICAS as a member. Applicants will need to hold active membership with ISCA to be eligible under the Reciprocal Membership Agreement route.

If you have been granted previous module exemptions under the SCAQ, you may be required to take the equivalent of the exempted module offered under the ICAS CA Qualification.

You may refer to the ICAS website for application details.

2. I became a CA (Singapore) through another reciprocal agreement or special arrangement pathway. Am I eligible to apply as a ICAS member through the Reciprocal Membership Agreement route?

No, CA (Singapore) members will need to have completed the normal education and training route through the SCAQ to be eligible for the Reciprocal Membership Agreement route.

3. I am a former CA (Singapore). Am I eligible to apply as a ICAS member through the Reciprocal Membership Agreement route?

The agreements are only applicable to CA (Singapore) members with active membership status at the time of application.

4. I am a CA (Singapore) but I did not complete the SCAQ, how can I become a member of ICAS?

You can consider taking the SCAQ to avail yourself for the recognition under the reciprocity agreement route. We believe that with the agreements with CA ANZ, CAI, CPA Australia, ICAEW and ICAS, and potentially with other professional bodies in the future, more will be encouraged to pursue the SCAQ to gain greater career mobility and have access to an extended professional network.
